THE MONTHLY DIVIDEND PAYCHECK CALENDAR

January 2020 Update

PLEASE READ THIS SECTION CAREFULLY BEFORE STARTING TO BUILD YOUR WEALTH WITH THE STOCKS IN THIS CALENDAR

Fellow Investor,

Welcome to the this month's update to the Monthly Dividend Paycheck Calendar from The Dividend Hunter.

In the following pages you'll find critical information on the ex-dividend and payment dates for stocks in the portfolio. The ex-dividend date represents the day before date when you must own the stock you wish to receive dividends from. Of course you should purchase it sooner, but the day before the ex-dividend date is when you must own it and still be entitled to the upcoming dividend payment. So you have to buy it the day before the ex-dividend date.

For example if the ex-dividend date is the 13th, then you must buy the stock no later than the 12th. The payment date is exactly what it is; it's the day that the company will pay dividends to all shareholders as of the ex-dividend date. Any new shareholders after that date will have to wait until the next payment date.

These dates are subject to change.

Many companies do not announce their ex-dividend date and payment date until they are close to them. This is for good reason; they need to know the health of their business and their cash flow in order to make sure they can afford to pay their dividend.

What this means is that some dates in this calendar are projected based on past dividend announcements from company and can vary from what they issue. Part of my responsibility to you is to stay on top of these changes and update the calendar accordingly.

We've made every attempt to accurately reflect the ex-dividend and payment dates for each of our portfolio holdings. As I mentioned this is based on historical patterns of payments as well as in some cases stated policy by the companies making the payments.

However, the further forward you go on the calendar (for example it's now January and you might be looking at a payment for April) the greater the possibility that the dates may need to be adjusted as we draw closer to them.

So my suggestion is that if you're truly interested in a stock, don't wait until the last minute to buy it and always look for periodic updates from me.

Each month we'll update the calendar to include new portfolio additions, make adjustments to ex-dividend and payment dates as warranted, and remove any portfolio holdings that no longer fit our criteria for wealth creation. This is just another benefit with your subscription to The Dividend Hunter.

On the next page is a brief explanation of how to use the calendar. It's entirely up to you which stocks from the portfolio you buy, but you should try to buy enough that you're receiving at least one dividend payment per month. As most are quarterly you could theoretically construct a dividend portfolio of only three stocks assuming each pays in a different month. There's an example of this on the next page.

On page 4 you'll find the current portfolio holdings with yield, payment frequency (quarterly or monthly), typical months when the dividend payment is made, first issue appearance, and recommendation going forward. For purposes of this portfolio Accumulate/Buy means buy shares of the stock while Hold means not to buy shares and if you already have shares to neither sell them nor buy more and to await further instruction.

Keep in mind that changes may have occurred to them since they were first added. Be sure to read updates in subsequent issues. They can be found at by logging in at www.investorsalley.com using your email address and password.

And now for a quick crash course on how to use The Monthly Dividend Paycheck Calendar for extra monthly income:

At its core The Monthly Dividend Paycheck Calendar is a system for investing in stock to give you dependable, predictable dividend payments each and every month.

For example, let's say you want to start out small and buy just three stocks. If you buy three that pay quarterly (every three months) and each pays in a different month then you'll receive a dividend payment every month, just spread out among the three. They won't all be the same amount of course, but you'll have steady stream of cash coming in. Let me show you a theoretical example.

Stock A pays in January, April, July, and October.

Stock B pays in February, May, August, and November.

Stock C pays in March, June, September, and December.

If you hold shares of only those three stocks then the payment schedule looks like the chart to the right where each stock pays you four times a year and each in a different month so you're get a payment every month.

And then the pattern starts all over again. Of course, you'll likely want to own more than one stock for each month so your payments are bigger. You can own as many in the portfolio as you like for even bigger monthly payments.

Please note that The Monthly Dividend Paycheck Calendar is not intended as part of an elaborate or complicated trading system using ex-div and payment dates as markers for frequent buying and selling of stocks. Nor is it a dividend capture strategy. The Dividend Hunter high-yield recommendations are intended as buy and hold investments to earn income from the dividend payments.
